Introduction

In December 2007, the City of Alameda authorized a 7-month, multi-faceted library planning project. This project included the development of a strategic plan and recommendations for the improvement of neighborhood libraries. A community survey and a technology review were also conducted to document existing conditions for planning purpose.

The project resulted in four separate, interdependent documents. The strategic plan is contained in this document while the recommendations for neighborhood libraries are presented in a companion document. Likewise, the community survey report and the technology review are each separate documents.

Key to the strategic planning process was the Library Board-appointed Library Strategic Planning Committee (Committee). This citizen-based Committee was intentionally representative of a broad cross-section of Alameda residents. The Committee included Library Director, Jane Chisaki, and Deputy City Manager, Lisa Goldman, as ex officio members.

The purpose of the Committee was to set service priorities for the Library based on its analysis of community input and data. Community input included a community-wide telephone survey, interviews of community stakeholders, focus groups, and an online survey to test the Committee's conclusions about service priorities.

The Library Management Team and staff assessed the Library's readiness to undertake the recommended service priorities. Library consultants Ruth Metz and Kathryn Page assisted the Committee and the Library Management Team in the collection of input and data and in its analysis.

Library Values

Underlying the strategic direction of the library are these core institutional values:

Implementation of the Strategic Plan

This strategic plan is a flexible blueprint for Alameda's city and library leadership. It is also a point of reference for the Friends of the Library and the Library Foundation. Library management can direct the use of library resources to the stated priorities and goals and the Friends of the Library and Library Foundation can also orient their fund-raising and resource allocation accordingly. Throughout the five-year period, library leaders will monitor the objectives and activities and community and library user feedback, adjusting these to meet changing needs and conditions.
